Catfish and the Bottlemen Release Next Single 'Fluctuate'...

It follows their last single, "Longshot" which is taken from their third studio album Balance, out on 26th April.

In an interview with BBC Radio 1's Zane Lowe, frontman Van McCann describes the track as the "heaviest" thing that Catfish and the Bottlemen have done to date.

Jacknife Lee, of U2 and The Killers, worked on the album which Van also spoke about in a recent interview: "He was the first up and Catfish & The Bottlemen have shared Fluctuate from their new album The Balance after it was premiered on Zane Lowe's Beats 1 show.

"When I'm writing a new song, the audience is all I really see." Van McCann reveals. "I get a vision of them in my head before I properly hear the melody or anything like that."

"If we put three or four of these songs in the set, it's going to be so strong. This run of shows we have coming up is just perfect
