Catfish and The Bottlemen reveal first new music in three years ahead of UK Arena Tour

Catfish and The Bottlemen's young and growing fan base finally get their hit of new music as the band releases new single, Longshot, OUT NOW on Island Records and accompanying video. Revealed exclusively on BBC Radio One's Future Sounds With Annie Mac tonight (8 Jan 2019, 19:30), the single ends a long wait for a passionate audience that coped throughout the pause by throwing themselves into ever bigger headline shows.

New music arrives on the cusp of a string of SOLD OUT UK arena dates in February and the announcement of the band's transatlantic return with a new US tour. The dramatic, one-take birds-eye video, filmed by long-term collaborator, Jim Canty (Hourglass and Twice), on a South Shields cliff top, completes their emphatic return.

Catfish & The Bottlemen Release New Single 'Longshot'

From playing in the car park at a Kasabian gig begging people to take their homemade CD, to this. This Llandudno band were always on the path to success, and here they are – on their seemingly endless escalator to success.

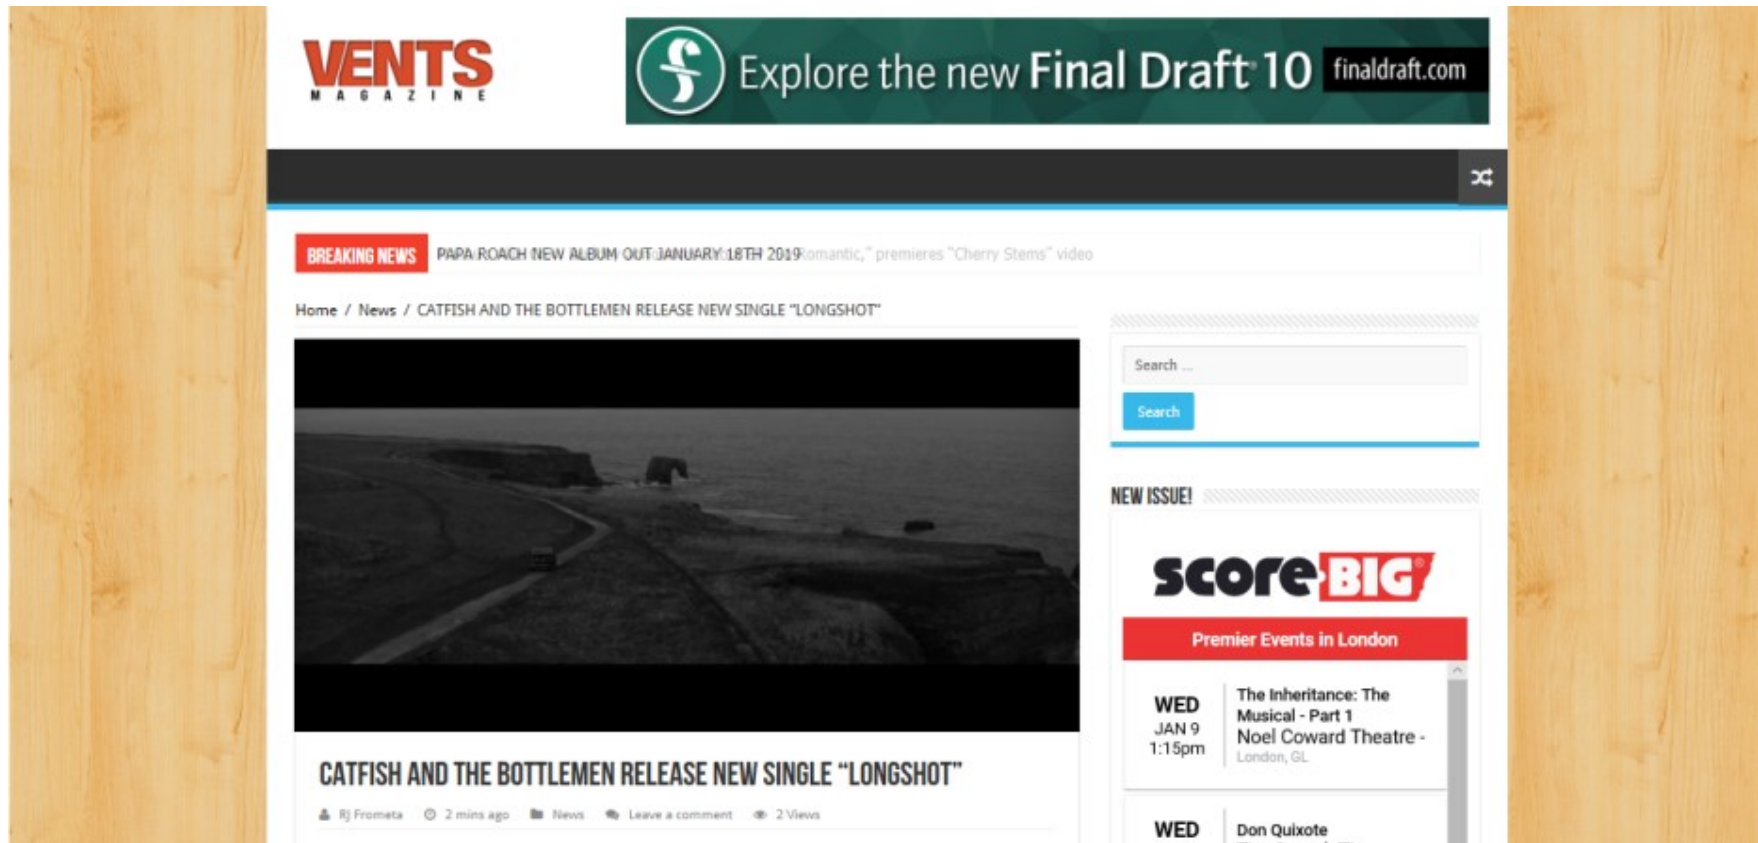

GO! Van McCann opens 'Longshot' with his intoxicating vocals, with muted guitar picking. The definition of 'calm before the storm'. Drummer Bob Hall then joins the party, setting the beat for the track before the entire band join forces. Filled with Johnny Bond's solo and Benji Blakeways' bass, the guitar transcends the track in the bridge and solo. The matching melodies of the drum beats and guitar riffs gives an alluring tingle to the track as a whole. Despite Van McCann swearing by "sticking inside the box" to their youthful alternative rock, the number oozes with musicality and their instantly recognisable sound.

Catfish and the Bottlemen return with new song 'Longshot'

After what feels like a lifetime, Catfish and the Bottlemen have finally made their return with brilliant new single 'Longshot', which was premiered on Annie Mac's Future Sounds show on Radio 1. The new tune is the first off an 11-track album, the band revealed on air, along with explaining how this album is a little more experimental than their previous two. The release date is yet to be announced, but it's safe to say after the fantastic reaction the single received from fans all over the world, the long awaited album is a highly anticipated one.

'Longshot' sees the band delving back into their guitar-driven indie rock sound to create a huge tune - one that is definitely made for the arenas the band will be playing on their UK tour next month.

Check out the video for 'Longshot' here;

After spending the past couple of years promoting their 2016 album, Catfish and the Bottlemen are ready to start their next chapter. This next chapter begins with "Longshot," which is the official first single off the UK rock band's upcoming third album. They premiered the track on BBC Radio 1, where they also revealed a few details about this new album. While they did not disclose much, they did mention that the album will be similar to their prior albums, in that it will have 11 tracks and will feature album artwork by the same artist.

Catfish and the Bottlemen return with a brand new single ahead of their arena tour.*

'Longshot' is the first new music since the band released their second album 'The Ride' back in 2016. The new single is looking likely to feature on the band's unannounced third album which we should receive later in the year. With the first play, which happened on BBC Radio 1, the Catfish lads also released the official video.

The Lids are due to play six sold-out arena dates across the UK next month.*
