BUBBLIN' UNDER

ROCKERS Nasty Cherry are evolving nicely into superior pop darlings and their latest effort, Lucky, is a reflective, sweet "and spiky little song" that sounds made for radio A-lists.

Veteran indie-heads will rejoice in The Coral's comeback today. Faceless Angels is a teaser from upcoming double album Coral Island and it's a suitably psychedelic strummer with echoes of The Doors.

Benny Blanco also has fresh produce in the form of You which perfectly harnesses the twin talents of Marshmello and Vance Joy with its clever blend of introspection and banging beats. Elsewhere, Busted's Charlie Simpson reflects on the end of a relationship in lovely ballad Blameless, while Out Of Time by LA singer Grace Gaustad is 80s-style pop.

And Maluma drops surprise new album #7DJ today fusing Latin and Reggaeton.

THE CORAL Announce TENTH Studio Album

Their first new music since 2018 includes single 'Faceless Angel.'

by TV News Desk Jan. 28, 2021

The wheels rattle into the thrilling unknown on The Coral's first new music since 2018, finding the unsurpassed, metamorphic gonzo-pop five-piece in the company of crooks, sell-by-date candyfloss and plastic skeletons as they release Faceless Angel. Of misplaced memories from a place and time that might never have been, the track precedes a new and vividly evocative body of work from the legendary Merseyside band in the form of their TENTH and first, ever double-album: Coral Island.

Squinting into the neon-lit penny arcades and draining an after hours glass with the displaced and dispossessed once the power is pulled, The Coral's latest caper concerns listeners with the light, shade, thrills and profound melancholy of coastal palaces packed with fun and fright. Both now and then, or perhaps never as fiction encroaches on reality, the feverous anticipation of a night amongst the screams, fights and romance of the fair become part of life on the newly-built Coral Island.

Welcoming travellers one trepidous step at a time, Faceless Angel sits amongst a series of promised audio visual portraits of and inspired by the Island's inhabitants. Conceived and created by artist, Edwin Burdis, the single's video was filmed 'on' Coral Island itself, a sprawling diorama purpose-built inside a deserted Chinese restaurant in Cardiff. It's the band and fans'

Singles

Merseyside's favourite sons, The Coral, have returned with their first new music in three years. 'Faceless Angel' is the lead-off single from their upcoming double album 'Coral Island'. Recorded at the legendary Parr Studios in Liverpool, it marks the five pieces next adventure in pop-cum-psychedelia. Will it stack up?

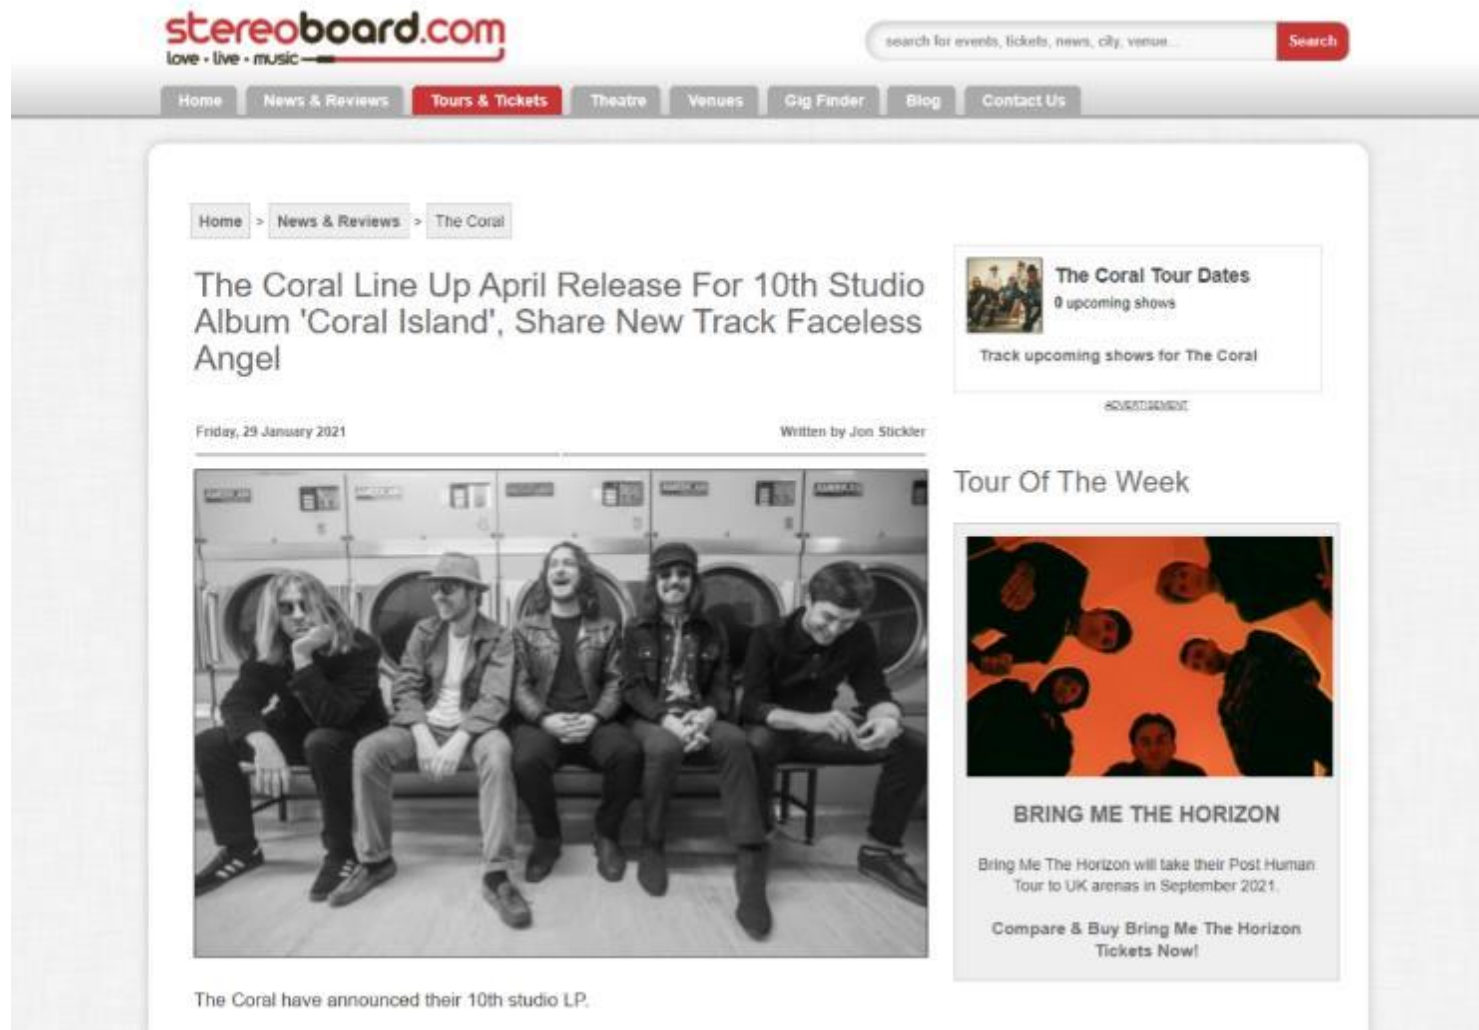

With the swagger of Duane Eddy and the beguiling pop of Lee Hazlewood, you bet your life it stacks up. Johnny Cash's abrasive licks are met with James Skelly's iconic vocals. Cool, crisp and indebted to the 60s (and Wirral), Skelly tells tales of forlorn seaside towns and the characters within, whose identities, fade into obscurity.

The Horrors classic 'Primary Colours', brought the wild and dank side of the British coast to life. Here, The Coral have painted the fall out of those heady days. Melancholic and despairing, alive but not living, they conjure the images of grey landscapes trapped in yesteryear.
